- 1) Any data subject who discovers or has reason to believe that the administrator or processor is processing his/her data in violation of the protection of his/her private and personal life or in violation of the law, especially if such data are inaccurate with respect to the purpose of their processing, can:
 - a) demand an explanation from the administrator or processor, or
 - b) demand that the administrator or processor remedy such state. Such remedial measure can include blocking, amending, supplementing or deleting the personal data.
- 2) If the data subject's demands per paragraph 1 are deemed legitimate, the administrator or processor shall remedy the incorrect state immediately.
- 3) If the administrator or processor fails to satisfy the data subject's demands per paragraph 1, the data subject is entitled to appeal directly to the Office for the Protection of Personal Data.
- 4) The procedure stipulated in paragraph 1 does not preclude that the subject can appeal to the Office for the Protection of Personal Data directly his/her demands.
- 5) If damages other than financial damages occur as a result of processing the data subject's personal data, the process for lodging a claim is governed by a special law.
- 6) If the administrator or processor breach the obligations imposed on them by law when processing personal data, such entities are liable for such breach jointly and severally.
- 7) The administrator is obliged without undue delay to inform the recipient of the data subject's request per paragraph 1 and of blocking, amending, supplementing or liquidating the personal data. The foregoing does not apply if it is not possible to inform the recipient or if the provision of such information would require a disproportionate amount of effort.

If you believe that your rights are being violated, you are entitled to send your complaint to the Office for the Protection of Personal Data, Pplk. Sochora 27, 170 00 Prague 7. For more information, please see www.uouu.cz.
