

WEBACCOUNTING

In today's global marketplace, the ability to provide management access to financial data - whenever and wherever needed - is crucial to maintaining a competitive edge. The IT infrastructure and applications required to provide this transparency have become increasingly complex and expensive. In addition, increasing reporting requirements - not only statutory but also management and tax - and the shortage of accounting professionals have made it very difficult to have your own multidisciplinary finance department covering all these needs.

Our offerings

PricewaterhouseCoopers offers you a business and accounting management software which is complete and scalable to match the needs of every size of business. Web Accounting enables you to have on-line access any place/any time to your financial and business information while outsourcing burdensome processing activities. Our offering is a combination of the PricewaterhouseCoopers accounting expertise and an accounting and business management platform. The solution is:

- fine-tuned for cost-efficient processing
- fully compliant with accounting and direct and indirect tax requirements
- on-line consultable
- flexible for outsourcing and extensive interactive collaboration

Technological concept

Webaccounting is a concept in which the comprehensive, non complex financial application can be accessed by an authorized user any time-anywhere using the internet. Users have access to an application installed on a farm of powerful servers within the secure PricewaterhouseCoopers environment. Enterprises are able to use financial applications over the internet in a user-friendly manner, while the database is kept within a secure environment.

Our services

In today's fast-paced global marketplace, the ability to provide you with access to the financial data - whenever and wherever needed - is crucial to having that competitive edge. The IT-infrastructure and applications required to provide this, have grown increasingly complex and expensive.

In addition, the increasing reporting needs, not only statutory but also management and tax, and the expense of employing full time accounting professionals have made it very difficult to have your own multi-disciplinary finance department covering all these needs.

While using the PricewaterhouseCoopers Webaccounting platform, we can offer you the following services, depending on your needs:

- set-up and organisation of your accounting system to meet your personal requirements
- migration of the data from your current accounting software
- provision of system user training for your in-house staff
- assistance with day-to-day maintenance of books and accounts
- temporary assistance during peaks of workload
- processing of large volumes of transactions
- accounting supervision and expertise (review and correction of accounting records)
- management and financial reporting (monthly/quarterly reports, statement of cash-flow, etc.)

The Software

PricewaterhouseCoopers uses the most fully featured web enabled financial software. You do not need to overspend now in order to gain flexibility for the future. You can start small, adding users and modules at a pace that suits your business plans and your budget. And moving up couldn't be any easier. This helps to guarantee excellent long-term returns on any investment in Webaccounting.

This section describes a few of the global features common to all modules:

- All modules share the same true Windows 'look & feel' with clear, informative and user-friendly screens.
- Task bars can be customised for each member of staff and multiple screens can be open at the same time, for even greater efficiency.
- Screen labels and messages can be changed at any time to reflect industry specific terminology
- No limit to the number of currencies you can trade in, or the number of exchange rates per currency.
- Two years' accounts can be kept open at all times, allowing you to post transactions forwards and backwards from the current trading period.

Your chosen combination of modules will be delivered as one package solution, according to your precise business requirements and your budget.
