Chartered Engineers – Capital Projects London

You enjoy big ticket work, but you'd also relish the chance to see the bigger picture. At PricewaterhouseCoopers, that's exactly what you can expect. Our Capital Projects team don't just work on the most complex national and global projects for diverse clients; they have the freedom to work across the full breadth of them.

This approach, coupled with the best aspects of a boutique culture and client focused expertise, has made us one of the most successful and dynamic teams in our field. In fact, last year we doubled in size. What's more, with an increasing demand for our advisory services, we're looking to further expand our team.

As a newly Chartered or near Chartered Engineer, you'll have a background in project management covering the technical, financial and commercial aspects of contracts. We'll also be looking for experience in the design or implementation of large, complex projects. This is an outstanding opportunity to work on challenging international projects and the prospects for career development and progression are excellent.
