

Jim Bucrek is an Advisory Partner who manages the Central Region Government Contracts Practice and is one of the founders of the government contracts practice serving companies and law firms in the Midwest and Southwest. Jim has over 30 years of private sector and consulting experience in government contracting, acquired while working for aerospace and defense and environmental companies and the firm. He was admitted to the partnership in July 2004.

In his role as an Advisory Partner, Mr. Bucrek provides advice to commercial companies and nonprofit organizations on pricing, costing and administrative requirements of federal contracts, grants and other agreements. He provides expert accounting services to law firms in litigation matters involving government contract disputes, as well as forensic investigation services to law firms and in-house counsel relating to government contract compliance issues. Jim also assists construction contractors with claims and related litigation matters.

His practice includes assisting clients in complying with the export control regulations, including the ITAR. He provides guidance to clients regarding export control requirements and issues, and he has contributed to independent assessment plan reviews of company export control program compliance as required by Department of State Consent Agreements.

Jim received a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration with majors in Business, International Studies and French from Aquinas College and an M.B.A. in Marketing Management from Western Michigan University.
