Mr. Krebs is a partner in PricewaterhouseCoopers' Advisory practice specializing in conducting forensic accounting investigations. He has conducted investigations relating to asset misappropriations and fraudulent financial reporting issues at both public and private companies. Mr. Krebs has interacted with audit committees, the SEC and other accounting firms in presenting and reviewing findings in 10A investigations.

He also specializes in consulting with clients regarding the resolution of disputes arising from merger and acquisition transactions, including purchase price disputes, earn-out disputes and breach of representation and warranty claims, through negotiation, arbitration and litigation. He has served in the capacity of expert witness and sole arbitrator/neutral accountant on numerous occasions and as the special assistant to arbitrators in many more.

Mr. Krebs has also performed and managed financial and accounting analyses in the context of commercial disputes involving issues such as breach of contract, securities fraud, fraud and embezzlement, insurance claims, antitrust violations, lender liability, patent infringement and wrongful termination. He has prepared expert reports and rendered expert witness testimony at both disposition and trial. In addition, he has also performed financial and valuation analyses in bankruptcy and reorganization related matters while representing unsecured creditors' committees and secured lenders.

Mr. Krebs received a Bachelor of Business Administration, with distinction, in Accounting from Iowa State University and a M.B.A with a Finance Concentration from Duke University.
