Opportunities for the property-occupying company – 14 October 2008

This seminar concentrates on how occupiers of business property can optimise the value of their real estate and minimise the associated tax liabilities, and is recommended for executives of companies that have significant property interests. Companies can generate significant benefits by having a well-considered commercial and tax strategy for the property they occupy.

Although the seminar is not aimed at our real estate industry clients, they might find it of general interest.
