ESG and insurance

Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) metrics and reporting are fast becoming a business imperative. Increased scrutiny from investors, shifts in consumer and customer expectations, and likely policy changes mean companies are facing new pressure to measure, disclose and improve on ESG-related issues.

Given their role in underwriting the activities of other corporates, and in addition to considering their own firms' responses to ESG, insurers and reinsurers should be well-placed to influence how others respond. And they have a unique responsibility to influence behaviours and help accelerate ESG outcomes. By doing so, they can reaffirm their role as an essential link in society.
