PwC's 2018 Corporate Responsibility Highlights

Hamilton, Bermuda – PwC Bermuda is pleased to share its 2018 Corporate Responsibility Highlights. This report represents all that the firm has accomplished together in the community and for the environment in 2018 as well as other highlights of the business.

Arthur Wightman, PwC Bermuda leader, said: “As a firm we are committed to playing a leading role in achieving a sustainable future and empowering communities by solving important problems and building trust in society, in line with our purpose. We believe our people – our greatest asset – have the power to create significant change and make a meaningful impact on our local community and environment.”

In 2018 the firm donated more than $1 million to Bermuda non-profit and charitable organisations, awarded $150,000 to Bermudian students, and employees have given over 1,000 hours of their time volunteering locally and provided over 1,780 pro bono hours.

In 2018 PwC Bermuda set a new environmental commitment: To drive efficiency to reduce our absolute carbon impact and offset our firm's business air travel emissions and energy consumption by 100%.

Scott Watson-Brown, PwC Bermuda partner, said, “With increased frequency we are seeing the effects of climate change on our ecosystems. Healthy ecosystems are critical to healthy economies. Real and lasting change is needed at both a local and global level.”
