

IESBA roundtables on non-audit services and professional scepticism

The International Ethics Standard Board for Accountants (IESBA), an independent standard setting body, will host a series of roundtables to help shape future standards. The roundtables will focus on provision of non-audit services (NAS) by auditors and concepts surrounding 'professional scepticism'. The IESBA recently launched initiatives on both issues to determine if its International Code of Ethics for Professional Accountants should be amended.

The target audience is investors, audit committee members, preparers, regulators and oversight bodies, academics, national standards-setters, firms and member bodies of the International Federation of Accountants. Roundtables will be held in:

- Washington, DC, 11 June
- Paris, 15 June
- Tokyo, 12 July

For further information and to attend, visit here.

