

Global Cyber Security Trends

Key Findings from the Cyber³ Conference in Okinawa 2015

In recent years, cyber attacks have become a threat not only to individuals, but to institutions as well. Insider attacks and data leakage have become a commonplace risk. This is no longer just an IT concern, but now a pervasive business issue which needs to be taken seriously by all levels of management.

In response to the current landscape, the Japanese Diet enacted the Basic Law for Cyber Security in 2014. Subsequently in January 2015, the Cyber Security Strategy Headquarters and National Information Security Center (NISC) were established. Most recently, the Cabinet of Japan with the support of the World Economic Forum has agreed to host the “Cyber³ Conference – Crafting Security in a Less Secure World” in Okinawa on November 7-8. This is an international conference which further demonstrates Japan’s commitment to promote a global dialogue on how to address cyber risks.

PwC is pleased to invite you to join our “Global Cyber Security Trends” seminar on November 9 in Tokyo. In this seminar, global cyber security thought leaders from the Cyber³ Conference in Okinawa will join and share key findings from the conference as well insights on the latest cyber security trends. PwC will also announce the results from our Global State of Information Security[®] Survey 2016.

This should be an informative event and an opportunity for you to access to global and local subject matter expertise in area of cyber. We hope that you will be able to join us for this exciting event.
