Data protection under Malaysia's PDPA is vital for protecting privacy and ensuring compliance. Organisations must adhere to the Act to prevent data misuse, building trust with stakeholders.

Recent technological advances have increased the need for robust data protection measures. With the rise of AI, cloud computing, and digital platforms, vast amounts of personal data are generated and shared, raising the challenges of protecting the data against breaches.

This workshop unpacks the evolving legal obligations of Data Protection Officers under Malaysia's PDPA 2010, with a focus on the latest 2025 guidelines. Participants will gain practical insights into managing compliance, mitigating data risks, and aligning privacy governance with business operations.

Topics Covered & Learning Outcomes
