

2014 Global Economic Crime Survey

Dear all,

We are pleased to invite you to participate in the 2014 PwC Global Economic Crime Survey. Since its inception in 2003 the bi-annual survey has been one of the premier thought leadership publications on economic crime and we are excited to continue this important work.

The aim of this survey is to assess corporate attitudes to fraud in the current economic environment, particularly in relation to incidents of corruption/bribery, money laundering and/or breaches of competition laws that have received increased public scrutiny. In addition the survey seeks to assess continuing developments in the world of cybercrime.

Your co-operation will play a role in establishing the extent of economic crime in business and help develop the means to mitigate its risk.

All the responses will be strictly confidential. This means that all survey data will be separated from the company name and responses will be associated only with your industry, company size, and other demographic data. No references to individual companies will be made in results or analysis of the survey data.

If you feel that someone else would be more appropriate to respond to this survey, please forward this invite on to them and let us know their details.

Thank you for your time - we hope that you find this survey to be of interest and value.

Yours sincerely

Lynn Walsh
Principal
