Amendment to IF

Issue

On 20 June 2016, the IASB issued an amendment to IFRS 2, 'Share-based Payment', addressing three classification and measurement issues.

The amendment addresses the accounting for cash-settled, share-based payments and equity-settled awards that include a 'net settlement' feature in respect of withholding taxes.

Impact

The amendment clarifies the measurement basis for cash-settled, share-based payments and the accounting for modifications that change an award from cash-settled to equity-settled. It also introduces an exception to the principles in IFRS 2 that will require an award to be treated as if it was wholly equity-settled, where an employer is obliged to withhold an amount for the employee's tax obligation associated with a share-based payment and pay that amount to the tax authority.

Insight

Measurement of cash-settled awards

Under IFRS 2, the measurement basis for an equity-settled, share-based payment should not be 'fair value' in accordance with IFRS 13. However, 'fair value' was not defined in connection with a cash-settled, share-based payment, and there has been diversity in practice.

The amendment clarifies that the fair value of a cash-settled award is determined on a basis consistent with that used for equity-settled awards. Market-based performance conditions and non-vesting conditions are reflected in the 'fair value', but non-market performance conditions and service conditions are reflected in the estimate of the number of awards expected to vest.

This change has most impact where an award vests (or does not vest) based on a non- market condition. Previously, some argued that the fair value of a cash-settled award was determined using the guidance in IFRS 13 and reflected the probability that non-market and service vesting conditions would be met. The amendment clarifies that non-market and service vesting conditions are ignored in the measurement of fair value.

RS 2 – Share-based payment

Modification of cash-settled awards

IFRS 2 includes guidance on how to account for a modification that adds a cash alternative to an equity-settled award, but it did not include guidance on how to account for a modification from cash-settled to equity-settled.

A modification to a cash-settled award is reflected immediately in the measurement of fair value. Any incremental value added to an equity-settled award is recognized over any remaining vesting period, and any reduction in value is ignored. The amendment addresses the accounting for a modification that changes both the value and the classification of a cash-settled award and, in particular, clarifies the order in which the changes are applied.

The amendment requires any change in value to be dealt with before the change in classification. The cash-settled award is remeasured, with any difference recognized in the income statement before the remeasured liability is reclassified into equity.

Awards with net settlement features

Tax laws or regulations may require the employer to withhold some of the shares to which an employee is entitled under a share-based payment award, and to remit the tax payable on the award to the tax authority.

The Basis for Conclusions paragraphs added to IFRS 2 by the amendment note that IFRS 2 would require such an award to be split into a cash settled component for the tax payment and an equity settled component for the net shares issued to the employee. However the amendment adds an exception that requires the award to be treated as equity-settled in its entirety. The cash payment to the tax authority is treated as if it was part of an equity settlement. The exception would not apply to any equity instruments that the entity withholds in excess of the employee's tax obligation associated with the share-based payment.

The cash payment to the tax authority might be much greater than the expense that has been recognized for the share-based payment. The amendment says that the entity should disclose an estimate of the amount that it expects to pay to the tax authority in respect of the withholding tax obligation where that is necessary to inform users about the future cash flows.

Who are affected?

Entities that have employee share-based payments will need to consider whether or not these changes will affect their accounting. In particular, entities with the following arrangements are likely to be affected:

- Cash-settled share-based payments that include performance conditions
- Equity-settled awards that include net settlement features relating to tax obligations
- Cash-settled arrangements that are modified to equity-settled share-based payments

The changes are effective from 1 January 2018, with early adoption permitted; and, for entities reporting under IFRS as endorsed by the EU, they are subject to EU endorsement. The transition provisions, in effect, specify that the amendments apply to awards that are not settled as at the date of first application or to modifications that happen after the date of first application, without restatement of prior periods. There is no income statement impact as a result of any reclassification from liability to equity in respect of 'net settled awards'; the recognized liability is reclassified to equity without any adjustment.

The amendments can be applied retrospectively, provided that this is possible without hindsight and that the retrospective treatment is applied to all of the amendments.

Currently, this has not been adopted locally but is expected to be adopted for local reporting.

Indefeasible right over a submarine cable system subject to real property tax

A corporation engaged in international telecommunications (telco) services was assessed for real property tax (RPT) on its international network of submarine cable systems used in servicing local and international telco companies.

The company disputed the RPT assessment saying that it is a mere co-owner of the "wet segment" of the property, and that it does not own any particular physical part of the cable system. At most, it owns the right to use a certain capacity of the said system. It reported this in its financial books as "Indefeasible Rights in Cable System".

In ruling against the company, the SC held that submarine or undersea communication cables are akin to electric transmission lines which the SC previously declared as subject to RPT. Strictly, both electric lines and communication cables are not directly adhered to the soil but pass through posts, relays or landing stations, but both may be classified as real property under the term "machinery" as found in Article 415(5) of the Civil Code since such pieces of equipment serve the owner's business or tend to meet the needs of his industry/works that are on real estate.

Thus, absent any express exemption by law, the submarine cables are subject to real property tax.

PwC: Notably, the SC, in concluding that the company is subject to RPT, anchored on Article 415(5) of the Civil Code. Given that the company is saying that it only owns a right to use (indefeasible right) the cable system. We believe it would still be subject to RPT. This is because such right is a real property under Article 415(10) of the Civil Code which states that contracts for public works, and servitudes and other real rights over immovable property are real properties.

Services to international carriers must be directly related to transport of goods or passenger to be zero-rated

A hotel company filed a claim for refund/TCC of alleged erroneously paid VAT related to its transactions with the international air carrier.

It argued that its services to an international air carrier licensed by the SEC to transact business in the Philippines are VAT zero-rated. The taxpayer provides room accommodations and other hotel services to the international carrier's guests, which include, but are not limited to, pilots and cabin crew during flight layovers in the Philippines, employees on company business, and any other third party for whom occupancy is authorized by the international carrier.

The CTA denied the VAT refund saying that for transactions with international air and shipping carriers to qualify for VAT zero-rating, the taxpayer must not only comply with the requisites provided under the Tax Code, but must likewise prove that:

1. Service rendered pertains to or must be attributable to the transport of goods and passengers.
2. The transport of goods and passengers must emanate from a port in the Philippines.
3. The transport of goods and passengers must be directly to a foreign port.
4. The common international air transport carrier must not dock or stop at any port in the Philippines.

Otherwise, services rendered to international air and shipping carrier, which are not directly related to their transport of goods or passenger, shall be subject to 12% VAT.

Credit is still good

Denied CWT refund can still be carried over

For failure to show that the income received and subjected to CWT was included in its ITR, the taxpayer's claim for refund of excess and unutilized CWT was denied. The taxpayer failed to reconcile the discrepancy between income payments per its income tax return and the certificate of creditable tax withheld.

Although the claim for refund of CWT had been denied, the CTA said that all is not lost for the taxpayer. Citing a Supreme Court decision which still allowed to carry over the excess income tax despite the denial of the refund, the Court elucidated that there would be no unjust enrichment in the event of denial of the claim for refund because there would be no forfeiture of any amount in favor of the government. The amount being claimed as a refund would remain in the account of the taxpayer until utilized in succeeding taxable years, as provided in Section 76 of the Tax Code. Unlike the option for refund which prescribed within two years from filing the ITR, there is no prescription for carry over.

PwC: Note though that in the SC case, the CWT refund was denied because the taxpayer opted to carry over the excess CWT. In this CTA case, the refund was denied for failure to show that the income received and subjected to CWT was included in its ITR. Thus, we have reservation whether the CWT could still be reverted to carry over after the denial.

Purpose prevails

Holding company may be treated as a financial intermediary subject to LBT

The CTA held that an entity holding assets consisting of shares of stocks and placement of funds on a regular and recurring basis is considered a non-bank financial intermediary whose income may be subject to LBT.

In this case, the City Treasurer of Davao assessed LBT on dividends and interest received by a holding company based on Section 143(f) of the LGC, which imposes tax on business of banks and other financial institutions. The taxpayer insisted that it is a mere holding company and not a bank nor a financial institution, thus not liable to the assessed LBT.

According to the CTA, the scope of the holding company's primary purpose is extensive enough to cover most of the principal functions of a financial intermediary. On this basis, the holding company may be subject to LBT on the dividends from its shares of stock and on interest from its money market placements.

Anti-royalty

Software maintenance service fees do not constitute as royalty payments

The following criteria are relevant for the purpose of distinguishing between payments for supply of know-how (royalties) and payments for the provision of services:

- Contracts for the supply of know-how concern information that already exists or concern the supply of that type of information after its development or creation and include specific provisions concerning the confidentiality of that information.
- In the case of contracts for the provision of services, the supplier undertakes to perform services which may require the use, by that supplier, of special knowledge, skill and expertise but not the transfer of such special knowledge, skill or expertise to the other party.
- In most cases involving the supply of know-how, there would generally be very little more that need to be done by the supplier under the contract other than to supply existing information or reproduce existing material.
- On the other hand, a contract for the performance of services would, in the majority of cases, involve a very much greater level of expenditure by the supplier in order to perform his contractual obligations.

Based on the foregoing conditions, the CTA ruled that payments made for the maintenance of the software are in the nature of service fees and not royalty payments.

Redeeming dividends

Gains on redeeming preferred shares are not dividends; gains from redeeming previously issued stock dividends may be taxed as dividends

In this case, the BIR attempted to re-characterize the gains from redemption of preferred shares as dividends subject to dividends tax.

The CTA ruled that net capital gains arising from redemption of preferred shares are not considered dividends subject to dividends final withholding tax.

Citing several SC decisions, the CTA explained that ordinary dividend is a distribution in the nature of a recurring return on stock in the ordinary course of business and with intent to maintain the corporation as a going concern.

On the other hand, distributions made when a corporation is winding up its business or recapitalizing and downsizing its activities may be treated as payment in the liquidation (complete or partial) of the corporation. In such case, the excess of the redemption price over the cost of the shares shall be considered as a capital gain subject to ordinary income tax.

The CTA elucidated further that there is only one provision in the Tax Code which treats as dividends the gain derived from redemption or buy back of shares – i.e., when "stock dividends" are redeemed whether pursuant to a partial or complete liquidation of corporations.

Thus, for stock dividends to be taxable, the following conditions must apply:

- There is redemption or cancellation.
- The transaction involves stock dividends.
- The 'time and manner' of the transaction makes it 'essentially equivalent to a distribution of taxable dividends.

However, when the stock dividend represents a mere transfer of surplus to capital account, the distribution shall not be subject to tax. Thus, redemption gain can only be treated as taxable dividends in case when the shares distributed as stock dividends are being redeemed.

The CTA, however, clarified that the law did not intend to automatically characterize as taxable dividend every distribution of earnings arising from redemption of stock dividends as the taxability of said distribution as dividends will still have to be determined on a case to case basis.

Source of profit

Representative office not a taxable presence

In this ruling, the BIR held that the income paid to a foreign corporation which has a representative office in the Philippines shall not be subject to the preferential tax rate if the income is effectively connected to the said representative office.

However, if the business transactions that created the income came from a separate and independent transaction from the representative office in the Philippines, then such income shall be subject to the preferential tax rate under the tax treaty. The principle is based on the view that in taxing the profits that a foreign enterprise derives from a particular country, the tax authorities of that country should look at the separate sources of profit that the enterprise derives from their country and should apply to each permanent establishment test, subject to the possible application of other tax treaty provisions.

Look-through

A branch was allowed to use tax residency of head office for tax treaty purposes

The BIR confirmed that interest paid by a local company to a Hong Kong branch of a Japanese bank is subject to preferential tax treaty rate of 10% under the PH-Japan Tax Treaty.

In this case, the taxpayer submitted a certification of tax residence of the Japanese bank from the Japan tax office.

Moreover, the ITAD ruled that although the nonresident foreign corporation has a permanent establishment in the Philippines (i.e., branch), the subject interest payments it receives from a domestic company under a loan agreement are not effectively connected with said permanent establishment. The loan agreement was entered into by the foreign corporation in its own capacity and the interest payments will not be covered through its Manila branch.

Under Article 11(2) of the tax treaty, if the recipient of such interest is also the beneficial owner, then the foreign corporation may avail of the lower interest rate of 10% on the gross amount of income.

Matter of trust: Tax me not

Tax exemption of employees' trust fund extends to interest income from bank deposits

In a ruling, the BIR confirmed that the interest income earned by an employees' provident fund from its bank deposit is exempt from final withholding tax.

Adopting an SC ruling, the BIR reiterated that if an employees' trust fund enjoys a tax-exempt status from income, it sees no logic in withholding a certain percentage of that income which it is not supposed to pay in the first place.

The tax exemption applies provided that in its investment activities, no part of the income of the fund shall be used for or diverted to purposes other than for the exclusive benefit of the members/officials or their beneficiaries. Otherwise, taxation of those earnings would result in a diminution of accumulated income and would reduce whatever the trust beneficiaries would receive out of the trust fund. This would run afoul of the very intent of the law.

(BIR Ruling No. 8-2016 dated 8 January 2016)

Government does not pay tax

An investment institution owned by a foreign government is tax exempt

In this case, the taxpayer, a government investment institution, requested for the confirmation of its exemption from Philippine income tax and consequently, from withholding tax on any income from investments in the Philippines.

The taxpayer represented that its objective is to receive funds from the foreign government allocated for investment, and invest and reinvest those funds in the public interest of the foreign government in such a way so as to make available the necessary financial resources to secure and maintain the future welfare of the foreign government. All funds managed by the taxpayer are coming solely from the foreign government. Most of the taxpayer's equity investments are in publicly listed equities where it owns less than 5%; thus, it has no control with regard to the management of the companies in which it invests.

The BIR confirmed the taxpayer's exemption from Philippine income tax and consequently, from withholding tax. This is based on Section 32(B)(7)(a) of the Tax Code stating that income derived from investments in the Philippines in loans, stocks, bonds or other domestic securities, or from interest on deposits in banks in the Philippines by (i) foreign governments; (ii) financial institutions owned, controlled, or enjoying refinancing from foreign governments; and (iii) international or regional financial institutions established by foreign governments shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from tax.

The exemption will continue to be valid subject to the condition that the taxpayer remains as a financial institution owned, controlled and financed by the foreign government.

Notice of assessment is required for RPT to accrue

The SC ruled that tax declarations and receipt issued for such cannot be validly considered as a notice of assessment.

A tax declaration and a notice of assessment are two separate and distinct documents. An assessment fixes and determines the RPT liability of a taxpayer pursuant to Section 27 of P.D. No. 464 (Real Property Tax Code).

It is deemed made when the notice to this effect is released, mailed or sent to the taxpayer for the purpose of giving effect to said assessment. As soon as the notice is duly served, an obligation arises on the part of the taxpayer to pay the amount assessed and demanded. The written notice of assessment is what ripens into a demandable tax. Without the notice, there is no valid assessment.

In contrast, a tax declaration is issued pursuant to Section 22 of P.D. No. 464 in which the assessor is merely tasked by the law to determine the assessed value of the property, i.e., the value placed on taxable property for ad valorem tax purposes. Thus, no tax accrues as a result of the assessor's issuance of a tax declaration.

In this case, the municipal assessor failed to furnish the company with the mandatory written notice of assessment. Since what was issued by the assessor is a tax declaration, no tax has yet accrued. It is only when the taxpayer had been furnished with the notice of assessment will its obligation to pay the RPT assessed against it accrue.

Countersign if you must

Alterations on invoices and official receipts without valid countersignatures are defective for VAT refund purposes

In a claim for tax credit certificate/refund for the unutilized input VAT, the CTA disallowed a portion of the claim supported by invoices and official receipts that were altered without countersignatures.

For failure to have the insertions/alterations in the supporting invoices and official receipts countersigned or to have the countersignature verified, the taxpayer did not properly substantiate the disallowed input VAT. While the taxpayer had the right to request its supplier to issue a compliant receipt/invoice, it had the corresponding obligation to check whether the insertions/alterations were properly validated or countersigned by the authorized signatory. Without the countersignature by the authorized signatory or proper validation of the alterations and additions, the said documents failed to satisfy the requirements of the law. Tax refund partakes the nature of tax exemption and is considered a legislative grace; thus, the rule of strict interpretation against the taxpayer-claimant applies.

According to the CTA, the absence of a countersignature verifying the alterations on invoices/official receipts is a fatal defect in a claim for refund.

Dismissal of tax criminal case does not extinguish civil liability provided there is preponderance of evidence

Despite a previous decision acquitting the accused in the criminal case, the court granted the motion for partial reconsideration of the civil aspect of the case to determine the civil liability of the accused.

It is an elementary rule in criminal procedure that the extinction of the penal action does not carry with it the extinction of the civil liability where the acquittal is based on reasonable doubt as only preponderance of evidence is required in civil cases. Preponderance of evidence is defined as the weight, credit, and value of the aggregate evidence on either side and is usually considered to be synonymous with the term greater weight of evidence or greater weight of the credible evidence.

Late filing of protest renders tax assessment final

The BIR issued an FAN to a taxpayer containing alleged deficiency tax liabilities as a result of its tax audit on the latter's book of accounts and other accounting records. As a response, the taxpayer filed a protest letter on the 31st day from the receipt of the FAN.

Section 228 of the Tax Code provides that a protest shall be filed on or before the 30th day from the receipt by the taxpayer of the FAN. The CTA held that the one-day delay in filing the response to the FAN rendered the tax assessment final, executory and demandable.

Audit can wait

Suspension of BIR field audit effective 1 July 2016

The new CIR has suspended all field audit and other field operations of the BIR relative to examinations and verifications of taxpayer's books of accounts, records and other transactions effective 1 July 2016 until further notice. The salient portions of the circular are as follows:

1. No field audit, field operations, or any form of business visitation in the execution of LOAs/audit notices, letter notices, or mission orders shall be conducted.
2. No written orders to audit and/or investigate taxpayer's internal revenue tax liabilities shall be issued and/or served except in the following cases:
   - Investigation of cases prescribing on or before 31 October 2016, including all cases under LOAs covering all internal revenue taxes for taxable year 2013 and prior years.
   - Processing and verification of estate tax returns, donor's tax returns, capital gains tax returns, and withholding tax returns on the sale of real properties or shares of stocks together with the related documentary stamp tax returns.
   - Examination and/or verification of internal revenue tax liabilities of taxpayers retiring from business.
   - Audit of National Government Agencies, Local Government Units and Government-Owned and Controlled Corporations including subsidiaries and affiliates.
   - Other matters/concerns where deadlines have been imposed by law or under the orders of the CIR.
3. Despite the suspension, assessment notices, warrants and seizure notices shall still be served. Also, taxpayers may voluntarily pay their known deficiency taxes without the need to secure authority from concerned Revenue Officials.
4. All BIR officers are required to submit an inventory of all outstanding LOAs/audit notices, and letter notices as of 30 June 2016 to the Office of the Commissioner in Excel format, both in soft copy (CD/DVD) and hard copy, on or before 16 July 2016.

Further to this, the CIR clarified certain issues arising from such suspension, discussed as follows:

1. For cases covered by the exception to the suspension of field audit, the reckoning for the counting of the prescription period differs for each type of tax. To be specific, the reckoning of the prescriptive period shall be counted from the required filing date of the specific tax return:
   - Withholding taxes - from the date required for the filing of the monthly return.
   - VAT - the prescribed filing date of the quarterly return.
   - Income tax - from the required filing date for the annual income tax return.
2. Since audit cannot be conducted on a piece-meal basis, all cases under investigation pertaining to LOAs covering all internal revenue taxes for taxable year 2013 and prior years shall be covered by the exception from suspension of audit/investigation.
3. The processing of request/application for tax refund/tax credit certificate included in the exception refers to those where a specific required timeline to process said request/application is prescribed under existing revenue issuances.

However, the service of the aforementioned notices is without prejudice to the right of the taxpayer to file a protest by way of request for reconsideration/reinvestigation.

The guidelines and procedures in the implementation of Republic Act No. 9505, otherwise known as the Personal Equity and Retirement Account (PERA) Act of 2008, are summarized as follows:

- The BIR's PERA Processing Office (i.e., the Audit Information, Tax Exemption and Incentives Division [AITEID] under the Assessment Service) shall accept only Applications for Accreditation filed by pre-qualified PERA Administrator based on "Qualification Certificate" issued by the concerned Regulatory Authority (i.e., BSP, SEC or the Insurance Commission).
- The accreditation of a PERA Administrator shall be valid from the date of issuance of the Certificate of Accreditation until it is suspended or revoked.

- Contributions to PERA can come from employees and/or their employers or self-employed individuals which shall not exceed PHP100,000 per calendar year, or PHP200,000 per calendar year if the contributor is an overseas Filipino.
- A contributor may create and maintain a maximum of five PERAs at any one time, provided that each account shall be confined to only one category of PERA Investment Product.

School is a different class

Policies and guidelines in issuing tax exemption rulings to qualified non-stock, non-profit educational institutions

The CIR has issued an order to exclude non-stock, non-profit educational institutions from the coverage of RMO No. 20-2013, as amended, subject to the following guidelines and policies, among others:

1. The tax exemption of non-stock, non-profit educational institutions is directly conferred by Paragraph 3, Section 4, Article XIV of the 1987 Constitution and is reiterated in Section 30(H) of the Tax Code.
2. For the constitutional exemption to be enjoyed, jurisprudence and tax rulings affirm the rule that there are only two requisites to be complied with:
   - The school must be non-stock and non-profit.
   - The income is actually, directly and exclusively used for educational purposes.
3. There are no other conditions and limitations.
4. The constitutional exemption upon non-stock, non-profit educational institutions should not be implemented or interpreted in such a manner that will defeat or diminish the intent and language of the Constitution.
5. Non-stock, non-profit educational institutions should file their respective applications for tax exemption with the office of the Assistant Commissioner, Legal Service, Attention: Law Division.

6. The necessary documentary requirements for non-stock, non-profit educational institutions are provided in this order.
7. Tax Exemption Rulings or Certificates of Tax Exemption of non-stock, non-profit educational institutions shall remain valid and effective, unless recalled for valid grounds. They are not required to renew or revalidate the ruling previously issued to them.
8. The Tax Exemption Ruling shall be subject to revocation if there are material changes in the character, purpose or method of operation of the corporation which are inconsistent with the basis for its income tax exemption.
9. To update the records of the BIR and for purposes of a better system of monitoring, concerned institutions with Tax Exempt Rulings or Certificates of Exemption issued prior to 30 June 2012 are required to apply for new ones.
