Objective

To equip you with basic knowledge of cross-border trade compliance to better manage business risk and identify trade saving opportunities.

Benefits of attending

Any professional involved in the cross-border buying or selling of goods is touched by trade compliance considerations. Whether employed in supply chain operations, tax, procurement or finance, the failure to understand and plan around import/export regulatory requirements can lead to unanticipated costs and a lot of wasted time. Product delays, stock-outs, emergency shipments, additional warehousing costs, customs audits and customs penalties are all common consequences of compliance failures.

To equip business professionals with the ability to take a more informed and pro-active role in the management of customs and trade risk in Asia Pacific, we offer this basic 101 workshop. During the workshop, our focus will be on how to manage compliance in practice by going through a number of practical examples and case studies based on our recent experience.
