Time:
10.00am – 5.30pm

Virtual:
Via Zoom

Objective

When you ask thought-provoking questions at the right time, you cut through red tape, get your ideas adopted, and make a tangible difference. Join us for a 2-day virtual training programme.

Challenges

You have great ideas that will make a difference, but for inexplicable reasons, your ideas are not being heard.

Your meetings are stuck in a “meeting – no action – meeting – no action” loop. Where indecision and lack of action rears its ugly head.

You're afraid of offending your bosses or colleagues with your questions. So your ideas go unheard, projects don't meet their objectives, and time is wasted.

Who should attend?

Technical Specialists,
Middle Managers, Leaders

What's the solution?

Come spend two days with us and learn the Art of Asking Good Questions. You'll learn how to:

- Generate intelligent questions – on-the-spot – during Q&As, meetings, and presentations
- Formulate critical questions that add value to discussions, while moving discussions forward without undermining others
- Verbalise questions clearly and confidently

About the workshop leader

Dr Kavitha Murulitharan

Kavitha has had an exciting career in academia. She graduated with a PhD in Molecular Biology from University Putra Malaysia. Her undergraduate studies were in biotechnology at the University of Malaya. She was also a recipient of the Yayasan Tan Sri Lee Shin Cheng Scholarship (2006-2009). As a former molecular biologist at University Putra Malaysia, she was attached to the Malaysian Genomic Institute (MGI). She developed the International Baccalaureate (IB) biology programme curriculum for an international school.

What past participants say:

"It works for both beginners and seasoned questioners."

"This programme gave me a framework and structure to formulate questions."

"Surprised and impressed... looked at the bigger picture, different angles, and deep dived into the solution."

"It will be really good if my colleagues can also attend this training. With these skills, we can improve the quality of meetings."
