

Our Energy and Mining Practice

Over the past 15 years, PwC Uganda has been at the forefront of developments and changes in Uganda's Energy and Mining sector, collaborating with international oil companies (JV Partners), government agencies and authorities, as well as local and international oil service providers (contractors/sub-contractors). During this period, PwC has played a pivotal role in shaping the tax, legal, and regulatory policy landscape, and has supported various government agencies, ministries, and authorities in building technical capacity in preparation for oil production in Uganda.

Our extensive engagement and wealth of experience mean we understand sector developments across the value chain. We combine local expertise with international knowledge, providing us with the in-depth understanding and capability to meet our clients' needs. Our oil and gas team in Uganda has access to our two Centres of Excellence for Energy on the continent – in Cape Town and Lagos.

Our commitment to Uganda's oil and gas industry extends beyond our services. We are founding members of the Uganda

Chamber of Mines and Petroleum, now known as the Uganda Chamber of Energy and Minerals.

We maintain close contact with our clients through thought leadership, policy advocacy, and sponsorship activities. Our partners and subject matter experts participate in many leading industry organisations at both national and international levels to stay abreast of regulatory changes, industry developments, and to hear first-hand from oil and gas professionals.
