Message from our leader

Dinh Thi Quynh Van

Chairwoman
PwC's Academy Leader,
PwC Vietnam

Jobs are changing – fast. This is effectively widening the skills gap between today's employees and the workforce of the future, and challenging businesses, and society at large, in fundamental ways. Preparing the workforce of the future will require billions of investment. However, the cost of inaction will be even higher. It's time for Vietnamese CEOs to take action and lay the groundwork for their upskilling agendas.

In the face of upskilling challenges, the good news is that employees are ready to take the plunge. According to our Vietnam Digital Readiness report, 84% of respondents say that they would learn new skills now or completely retrain in order to improve future employability.

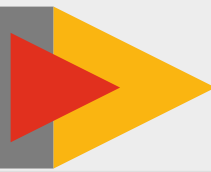

Your people should be at the heart of every upskilling strategy. Starting with leading in a way that inspires people to want to boost their knowledge and skills, businesses should give their employees the freedom to opt in, and the autonomy to immediately apply their new skills in their day-to-day work so that they feel meaningful and relevant.
